DATE SET FOR PROBE OF CRAWFORD DEATH

All Parties Interested in the Case Announce They Will Be Ready to Go Before the Grand Jury January 21.

A deep probe into the alleged murder of the late Joshua Crawford will be started January 21, according to a statement made Wednesday by Attorney John Y. Smith, solicitor general, in the litigation.

Colonel J. S. James, chief counsel for the forty-eight contending heirs-at-law of the aged land owner, also stated on Wednesday that he had unearthed valuable evidence in the form of documents in the hands of relatives of the dead man who are coming here before the grand jury from Texas and Arkansas.

Burton Smith, chief counsel for Mrs. Crawford, appeared before Judge Ben Hill on Wednesday and asked the court to make a bill for presentation to the grand jury and order the special prosecutor to proceed with the case at once. This was done following the hints to the effect that Attorney Smith, who is acting for the state in the death probe, would soon withdraw from the case unless the prosecuting witnesses appeared at an early appearance. Judge Ben Hill

LADIES! SECRET TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR Bring Back Its Color and Luster With Grandma's Sage Tea Recipe.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn graying and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every trace of dandruff; stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, in the drug store, known as "Wigley's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of trouble.

Wigley's wispy, gray, faded hair is not stiff. We all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wigley's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw the tonic through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by the time the hair has disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

NO MORE MARRIAGES BY CLERKS OF COURT

Still Believe They Have Legal Right, But Will Take No More Chances.

"Clerks and deputies of the municipal court have suspended marriages." This was the statement issued Wednesday from the office of Chief Clerk Miller when the subject of the powers of the court attaches as regards the tying of matrimonial knots came up. Following the discussion aired in The Constitution on Wednesday on the point, Chief Clerk Miller conferred with his force and despite the fact that the deputies still believe they have "marrying" rights, it was decided to call off all future attempts to bring cheer to lovers.

Attorney Edgar Watkins, president of the Atlanta bar association, declared on Wednesday that the action of the municipal court deputies was in line with his belief as to how the court law read touching upon performing marriage ceremonies.

"I'm glad it has all turned out as well as it has," said Mr. Watkins. "The clerk, I believe, feels sorrowful over the outcome of the matter."

I guess a bachelor like me has a right to marry at least one woman in a lifetime," he mused on Wednesday. "Well, that has been denied me now and I feel that I have been discriminated against."

The warning has been sent forth to the ordinary citizens not to send couples to the municipal court any more if said couples seek aid of that branch of Fulton county's judiciary touching upon marriage rites.

Judges of the new tribunal are not barred from performing marriage ceremonies, however, in the opinion of Attorney Watkins. He said that he had such a statement on Wednesday.

The act was passed before passage so as to allow the judges or the new court to take care of the retiring justices of the peace and believe that the court included the right of performing a marriage ceremony.

ATLANTA THE LOGICAL PLACE.

Atlanta's strategic supremacy in the financial and business activities of the southeast has never been paid more significant nor more spontaneous tribute than that conveyed in the testimony of experts before the New York sitting of the federal reserve organization committee. Beginning with such financial authorities as J. P. Morgan, head of the great harvest of that name, and including bankers, business men, commercial organizations and students of economics, witness after witness declared that Atlanta should be "comprehended in any list of American cities essential to the establishment of the regional reserve bank system. This means, if it means anything at all, and if the opinion of these specialists weighs with the commissioners that one of the regional reserve banks will be located in Atlanta.

The value of this evidence lies in its wholly voluntary and official character. None of these men or institutions were speaking for themselves or had anything to gain by singling out cities other than New York, whose place is already secure. They addressed themselves solely to the logic of the situation, and the logic pointed inevitably to Atlanta as the site for a regional reserve bank.

Under the new currency law a regional reserve bank is valuable only as it affords quick touch with the entire territory it serves. Atlanta affords that access.

From Raleigh to New Orleans and north to Louisville—in a word, with the Ohio river as one boundary and the Gulf of Mexico as the other—the Atlantic for the other two—Atlanta can reach any point within that big territory in a night's run.

That situation does not obtain even approximately with any other city in the southeast.

It is, therefore, natural and logical that unbiased experts should pick Atlanta as the winner for a regional reserve bank, and natural that the weight of professional opinion should confirm their choice.

The strategic supremacy which influenced their policy has been one of the strongest contributing factors to the phenomenal growth of this city, and will make its effect manifest even more substantially in the future.

JAMES R. WYLLIE, IDEAL CITIZEN.

With the death of James R. Wyllie, at the age of 83 years, in his home in Atlanta, there passes a man who has been instrumental in most of the phases of the substantial growth of the city, and one whose life offers concrete illustration of the value to the community of a citizen with an ideal. For the past decade or more Mr. Wyllie figured in the public activities, by reason of his advanced years.

But prior to that time, and for many years, his career vividly typified the "Atlanta spirit" in a degree that challenges comparison.

He was prominently identified with practically all the expositions that have done so much to develop Atlanta. As a general manager of the Cotton States and International Exposition, in 1895, his practical vision and his wonderful faculty for executive ability contributed largely to its success. His civic interest was that time spent in the advancement of the public interest was time spent in the advancement of the individual, and he lived up to it religiously. His personal business made large demands upon his time, but he was never too busy to put by private affairs and give time and thought to matters looking to the advancement of his city. At all meetings called to consider vital projects he was a conscious figure, prudent and far-seeing in counsel and quick to render his services when called to action. He typified in this respect the "Atlanta spirit," always ready to selfish personal ambition for the general welfare and rich in the gift of commending his enthusiasm to others.

While the past years of his life had been spent in high career and retirement, he wrought with sufficient notoriety for Atlanta to mark his passing as one who will go to history as one of the great builders of the city. His life embodied all these public-spirited and aggressive traits which offer to us an example to the upcoming generation.

LIBERAL SISTER CITIES.

The bankers of Macon and Columbus have performed a generous and graceful action in concentrating their influence behind the movement to secure one of the federal reserve banks for Atlanta. It is obvious that the larger the number of cities applying in any given state or section for this honor the smaller the prospect of success for any one of them. Local bickerings and jealousies might easily divide strength and prevent the uniting of effort behind the one city making the strongest and most logical bid for the distinction.

The bankers of our sister cities have very promptly and with their characteristic acumen recognized the situation.

Macon realizes that if a regional bank is to come to this section, and that seems ordained, it is infinitely better for Macon that it be located at Atlanta, a scant three hours' ride, than in some other state. In the very nature of things a bank coming to Atlanta would afford Macon, from the point of view of practical usefulness, as much and as direct service as though it were located in Macon. The clearinghouse of Macon was built to appreciate this situation. It is clear and well-recognized set of resolutions its members have gone on record as urging the claims of Atlanta.

And the same argument applies relatively to Columbus.

It is a broad-minded policy as this that bring cities together in a common bond and make them powerful factors in their mutual advancement, and in the advancement of the state of which they are a part. Both Macon and Columbus have acted in liberal conformity with this spirit, and Atlanta will forget their action. It will be this city's privilege to enforce a similarly wide interpretation of the obligations of mutual citizenship whenever the opportunity offers.

EUROPE PUTS IT UP TO US.

Washington dispatches represent the European nations as enunciating a new bid to perfectly natural policy toward the Mexican situation, as the latter touches European financial interests. As the result of quiet conferences between European ambassadors and ministers the semi-official announcement is made that while Europe will leave America Europe will also expect America to protect the financial interests in Mexico of her citi-

There are very few cases of contagious diseases in the county at this time, certainly fewer than at any time previous to this year, and by a continuation of rigid inspection which has prevailed during the last year, these will be reduced to a minimum.

PURCHASING AGENT.

In the early part of the year the board created the office of purchasing agent for Fulton county, whose duty it is to act as assistant clerk and to purchase all supplies for the various departments under this board. Mr. C. M.

wish to further recommend that the board authorize the police committee of 1914 to install a telephone system in the police department, to be used by the patrolmen as well as the public. Such a system has worked out and we can get forty call boxes at suitable locations in every part of the county that will be accessible to the police and the citizens, and we believe that such a system will increase the efficiency of the department at least 25 per cent, as well as render to the general public facilities for calling the police in case of trouble of any kind.
